Online Gaming: Sharing Information Discussion Cards

Playing games online (on the Internet) is not safe.

Do you agree?

A friend at school suggests a new game for you to try. Later on at home you launch it on your computer and it asks you to add in your name, your age, your address and an email address.

What should you do?

It is not safe to add your full name, address, phone number or other personal information on a computer game.

But it's OK to add the information if you're playing on a tablet or a mobile phone.

Do you agree?

When I have finished playing and I turn off the online game, all of the information I typed will be gone.

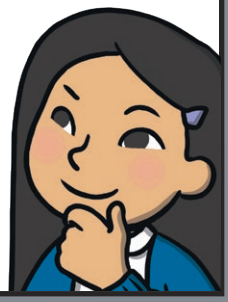

True or false?

twinkl.com

Someone has asked me to add a photograph of my family to my profile for a game.

What should I do?

Mo is playing a game online with someone called Sam. Sam sends Mo a message and asks, 'What are you having for dinner tonight?' Mo doesn't know whether it is safe to answer Sam's question.

What would you write?

twinkl.com

It's OK to tell someone my name and my address, as long as I don't give them my password or my phone number.

Do you agree? What kind of information might it be safe to share with other gamers? What information should you never share?

twinkl.com